Stop And Go Lights Needed At Death Corner

The death corner, 159th street and Wolf Road in Orland Township claimed another victim Saturday night when a young man was killed and a number of other persons were injured as the result of a head-on collision when the drivers of both cars failed to slow down or stop for the intersection.

Stop signs have been placed on Wolf Road on both sides of 159th street, but at night these signs are not easily visible and many autoists do not see these signs in the day time. This death corner has been the scene of several fatal crashes just because auto drivers disregard the intersection. With heavy traffic on both highways, a mere stop sign on a post is no protection whatever. Even arresting offending drivers as has been done is of no avail.

The only thing that will cut down the death toll at this intersection, is the installation of a stop and go electric light which is visible by day and night and which the largest percentage of auto drivers do obey, where they will not consider a stop sign. Some drivers go so fast, they fail to see a stop sign on a post, but they cannot help but see an electric stop and go light.

The traffic is very heavy at this point and more than double so on Sundays and holidays. In view of this, the installation of a stop and go light is fully warranted.

The editor of this paper has taken the matter up with Senator R. J. Barr; Chas. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor Club and Representative Bernice Van der Vries of the Orland district, to see what can be done about having a stop and go sign installed at 159th and Wolf.

Human life must be safe-guarded and if a stop and go light will help stop accidents and save life, then such a light should be installed.

A similar light is located at an intersection out in the country several miles from La Grange on Kean avenue and traffic at that intersection is no heavier than at 159 and Wolf. Southwest Highway traffic goes over Wolf Road and this alone is heavy and with the addition of 159th street traffic, both highways are very heavily traveled.

Mrs. Frank Bischoff Files Suit For Separate Maintenance

A mother-in-law's influence was Charlotte Bischoff's chief complaint when she filed suit for separate maintenance against her husband, Frank H. Bischoff, dairy farmer, last Thursday in the circuit court.

They were married last year in Mokena and lived together on a farm northwest of Mokena until a few weeks ago, she claimed.

Mrs. Bischoff alleged that her husband, following his mother's request, began to sleep by himself last November and recently began taking his meals with his mother, leaving his wife to cook for and eat with the hired help.

Often, she alleged, Frank would stay away until late at night, and then wouldn't account for his whereabouts or doings. Furthermore, his wife stated, he refused to provide any recreation for her, and wouldn't take her to church or to visit her parents.

Ever since January, she continued, he has been demanding that she leave the house, without any reasonable cause except that his mother wanted her to.

The suit contained Mrs. Bischoff's assertion that Bischoff believed she was unable to meet the expectations of his mother and that he owed his obligations of kindness and affection to his mother rather than a kind course of conduct towards his wife.

George N. Blatt, Sr., is the plaintiff's attorney.

Youth Killed When Autos Crash Headon At Intersection

New Lenox Civic Club Considers Fire Protection Plan

Tuesday night the New Lenox Civic club met in the New Lenox school auditorium to discuss and consider plans for securing fire protection for the village and township. Since Joliet will not let their fire department make calls in New Lenox township there is no fire protection of any kind here.

Attorney J. Hinton Massey of Plainfield was present and explained in detail how Plainfield township outside of the village secured fire protection by means of creating a fire district and securing enough taxes with which to buy and operate a fire truck. Inasmuch as New Lenox is an unincorporated village the only way in which funds could be raised for fire equipment would be through the creation of a fire district taking in the entire township. All of the legal details were explained and the usual mode of procedure outlined. Fire Chief Taylor was also present and gave some good pointers on how to organize a volunteer fire department. A committee has been appointed by President Melvin Whittaker of the Civic club to investigate the fire protection plan from all angles. Frank Vally is the chairman of this committee.

Frankfort Bowling Team Scores

A lineup of Frankfort Bowling team scores will be found on page 7 of this issue.

Failure to slow down or stop at the intersection of 159th street and Wolf Road resulted in the death of a young man and injury to several others, Saturday mid-night.

Roy A. Wilke, aged 21, of Mokena, was killed and four others were injured in a head-on collision between two cars at the point named.

Wilke was riding in a car driven by Emery Draper, 26, of Morris, in Grundy County, which was struck by that of Philip D. Weatherbee, 28 of 432 Wellington avenue, Gary, who was attempting to make a left turn.

Wilke was thrown out of the car and was so badly injured that he died within a few minutes. The ambulance was summoned from Oak Forest and the state highway police from Blue Island.

Miss Viola Wilke, sister of the dead youth suffered lacerations and internal injuries and was removed to the Oak Forest Infirmary hospital where it was said her condition was critical.

Miss Beatrice Fehland, 22 years old, who has been working as a maid in the home of Dr. W. V. Hedges in Frankfort was also seriously injured, suffering internal injuries. She asked that Dr. Hedges be notified of the accident and she was taken to the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet. X-rays have been taken to determine the extent of her injuries.

Emery Dreiper, aged 24 years, the driver escaped with slight cuts and bruises. Weatherbee, driver of the Gary car was not hurt.

The crash occurred in front of the filling station of Fred Ingraham. The latter resides directly back of the station had just gone to bed when he heard the terrific crash about mid-night. He hurriedly dressed and was about the first person on the scene of the crash.

The wrecked cars were towed to a garage in Tinley Park.

This death corner has claimed the lives of several other autoists.

A Cook County Deputy Coroner has postponed the inquest into the Wilke youth's death to April 30 at one o'clock in the afternoon at the Funk and Adler undertaking establishment at 159th and Cicero in Oak Forest.

Expect More Arrests In Bremen Relief Scandal

Raymond Hilliard, head of the investigation department of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, returned from Springfield yesterday to take personal charge of the inquiry into the burning of the Bremen township relief office on Feb. 28.

Albert Stolz, wealthy coal dealer of Blue Island and Midlothian, was arrested Friday night as one outcome of the examination of records which were partially burned in the fire. Hilliard and Lieut. Fred Muhlenhausen of the Homewood county highway police, who arrested Stolz, indicated that more arrests are expected soon.

The warrant for Stolz's arrest, signed by Gerald Griffen, one of Hilliard's assistants, charged Stolz with larceny and embezzlement "in excess of $2,000." Griffen, when he signed the warrant, declared that Stolz was being dealing in relief disbursing orders and had been giving rebates to James B.nette, missing bookkeeper of the relief office, on extra large checks from the township relief funds for relief coal orders.

Stolz denied the charges. He lives at 1,960 Maple avenue, Blue Island and has a coal yard at 14900 South Crawford avenue in Midlothian.

Bennette is being sought on bigamy conspiracy, and other charges. He is accused of faking disbursing orders issued by the relief office for relief supplies and later redeemed in cash.

Frank Doherty, deputy state fire marshal, said the burning of the relief office, at 147th street and Cleveland avenue, near Posen, was a case of arson. Auditors from the IERC had begun an inspection of the books the day before the fire.

Eugene Brown, colored, an investigator for the relief office, was arrested March 9 on charges of conspiracy and violation of the corrupt practices act when he admitted dealing in the disbursing orders. He was released on bond of $2,500.

Arthur Reiber, operator of a gasoline station at 147th street and Cicero avenue in Midlothian was arrested last Thursday night on a charge of conspiracy in the cashing of checks forged and then indorsed by Bennette as payment for fake disbursing orders.

THAT THIRD TERM

Our Founding Fathers Found The Baby on Their Doorsteps

Kept Uncle Samuel in Stew 153 Years—Hamilton Wanted Presidents 'During Good Behavior'—One-Term Bills Pop Up Frequently.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Between now and the summer day when the Democratic party nominates its candidate for President, the third term issue will be one of the most discussed questions of the 1940 campaign. That discussion may continue until November 4, increasing in intensity as election day draws near. To help our readers judge for themselves the merits of the arguments for or against a Presidential third term, this newspaper presents herewith the first in a series of three articles which give some of the historical background of that issue. It is neither FOR nor AGAINST a third term; it simply scans the past and gives an impartial report of its findings.

I. THE FOUNDING FATHERS AND CONGRESS

SHALL the President of these United States be elected for a certain term of years and thereafter be ineligible?

What shall that term be? Six years? Seven years? Twenty years?

Or shall he be permitted to serve "during good behavior"?

Those were some of the questions which the Founding Fathers, meeting in Philadelphia 153 years ago, tried to answer as they struggled with their gigantic task of devising a frame of government for the new republic.

Considered Seven-Year Term.

On May 29 Gov. Edmund Randolph of Virginia and Charles Pinckney of South Carolina both presented resolutions providing for an executive "to be chosen by the national legislature for a term of . . . years and to be ineligible a second time." Three days later a vote was taken on a seven-year term for this executive. Five states voted for it and four against it.

The next day a motion to make the executive ineligible after seven years also was carried, by a vote of 7 to 2. Apparently that matter was settled. But two weeks later it was brought up again and Alexander Hamilton proposed that the supreme executive authority be vested in a "Governour" to be elected to serve during good behavior.

The delegates turned thumbs down on this idea and on June 19 voted for a seven-year term for the President who should be ineligible for re-election. A month later, however, they changed their minds and struck out the ineligibility clause. Then followed a long debate.

'During Good Behavior.'

Once more the "during good behavior" clause bobbed up but again it failed to pass. There was a suggestion that the Chief Executive be elected for 20 years and another that he be chosen by the legislature with the provision that no person be eligible for more than six years in any 12 years. Both of these plans were rejected and eventually they went back to the seven-year term with its ineligibility-a-second-time proviso.

This was in July and for the next two months the presidential term was repeatedly debated. On September 4 it was brought up again with the suggestion that the President's term be made four years. A motion to change this back to seven years and another to six years were defeated and on September 15 it was finally agreed that the President should be chosen by an electoral college for four years, no limit to his re-eligibility being fixed.

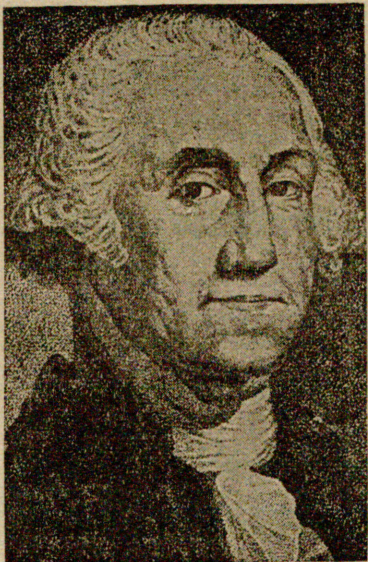

Problem Bobbed Up Again.

Although the adoption of the Constitution on September 17, 1787, apparently settled this question of presidential tenure satisfactorily, it was a question that was destined to come up again and again in future years—especially in the legislative branch of our government. After the contested election of 1800, a resolution was presented in the senate "that no person who has been twice successively elected President shall be eligible as President until four years elapse, when he may be eligible to office for four years and no longer." But the senate rejected this by a vote of 25 to 4.

Twenty years later, however, the senate passed a joint resolution by a vote of 36 to 3, providing that no man should be chosen President for more than two terms. But the house failed to act on this resolution so nothing more was done about presidential tenure until the contested election of 1824 brought it up again. Then no less than 10 amendments to the Constitution, intended to limit the President to one term were debated in congress.

Many Resolutions Offered.

During Jackson's administration 21 joint resolutions, dealing with a limitation of the presidential term, were introduced in congress but none was acted upon. Some of these recommended a single term of four or six years, others prohibited a third term and still others were against more than two consecutive terms. In Van Buren's administration 10 one-term joint resolutions were introduced but failed to pass.

For the next 30 years the third-term issue was dormant, mainly because there was a succession of one-term Presidents. But during the administration of Andrew Johnson there were 12 joint resolutions recommending single presidential terms without any action being taken upon them. But in 1875, when it seemed likely that Grant would be a candidate for a third term, William M. Springer of Illinois introduced a resolution in the house.

That in the opinion of this House, the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States, in retiring from the presidential office after their second term has become, by universal concurrence, a part of our republican system of government, and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our free institutions.

This resolution was adopted by a vote of 234 to 18, with 38 not voting.

Two years later, after President Hayes in his inaugural address had recommended a constitutional amendment limiting the President to a single term of six years, Springer offered another resolution embodying Hayes' recommendation and other reforms. But no action was taken on the resolution.

The third-term issue remained in the background until 1892, when Grover Cleveland, who had been first elected in 1884 and defeated in 1888, was again elected. Then no less than 13 amendments were introduced in congress to limit the presidential term in various ways.

Brought up in 1912.

Again there was a lull of 20 years until 1912 when the house committee on the judiciary submitted a favorable report on a resolution proposing a constitutional amendment limiting the President to a single six-year term but no further action was taken. During this year some 21 such amendments were introduced in the house and in 1913 the senate passed a joint resolution, by a vote of 47 to 23, proposing a similar amendment but the house refused to act upon it.

In 1927 when talk was started about the possibility of Calvin Coolidge seeking re-election, the anti-third term resolutions began to come thick and fast. The first one, offered by Rep. Beck of Wisconsin, a Republican, was practically the same as the Springer resolution of 1875, suggesting a constitutional amendment against a third term. Then Senator LaFollette introduced a similar resolution in the senate.

Resolutions Not Acted Upon. In the meantime, Representative Fairchild of New York, a Republican, had offered a constitutional amendment that "No person shall be eligible to the office of President who has previously served two terms, whether by election or by succession due to the removal, death, resignation or inability of the President where the term by succession shall have continued for a period of two years or more."

No action was taken on any of these proposals by the Sixty-ninth congress but they came up again in the Seventieth culminating in LaFollette's resolution being reintroduced on January 27, 1928, amended and passed by the senate on February 10 by a vote of 56 to 26. It said:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States in retiring from the presidential office after their second term has become by universal concurrence, a part of our republican system of government, and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our free institutions."

Tanks Replace Horse Troops On Battlefield

PARIS.—The strange and "impractical" weapon of war invented by British and French officers in 1915-16 has grown into one of the most effective offensive weapons in World War II.

First used in the battle of the Somme almost a quarter century ago, the armored tank is now considered a monster of Mars, capable of spitting death into enemy positions where troops cannot go.

This weapon had its first real test in Germany's "blitzkrieg" against Poland, where massed tanks were sent against enemy emplacements with excellent results.

Modern tanks, looking like armored bugs scuttling across hills, fields and trenches, may vary in size from one to one hundred tons. For heavy offensive work they are protected by armor plate two inches or more in thickness. Other tanks may have only quarter-inch plate.

Some Carry 30 Men.

Their armament runs from machine guns to 105 mm. cannon and they can speed along up to 60 miles an hour on their endless-chain tracks. Crews of the earliest tanks numbered not more than two; today, France's giant tanks sometimes carry 30 men. Each has a specific duty as gunner, mechanic, navigator, control operator or radio man. Such monsters are practically a battleship on land.

Tanks may be used either as mechanized cavalry for "opportunity" offensives or as sheer force weapons for frontal attacks. Some models can swim rivers; others lay their own bridges. Still others carry trailers and lay down smoke screens to shield advancing troops. One of their most effective weapons is a tongue of searing flame which can be thrown up to 50 feet and penetrates inside the gun slits and portholes of pillboxes.

Flank Movements Used.

When used as cavalry the tanks employ wide, swinging movements around the enemy's flanks. These take the form of excursions into his rear areas, attacks and ripostes. For this work light or medium light tanks are needed, organized in small and compact "armored" divisions. Each has its own supporting mechanized artillery and motorized infantry.

Heavy tanks are used for the frontal attack where troops are attempting to break through the enemy's lines. It is in this type of warfare that most furious fighting develops. Large numbers of tanks are needed for such attacks; German experts believe they need 50 to 100 tanks per kilometer of front. Light tanks follow up.

Artillery barrages lay the groundwork for such advances, striving to silence enemy batteries, smashing pillboxes and—most important—putting anti-tank guns out of commission.

Another defensive weapon is the tank barrier, which consists of spiked obstacles penetrating from the ground. These may be concrete blocks, heavy logs or steel rails. In Switzerland, where protective measures are being taken, steel anti-tank barriers are arranged to jump out of emplacements in the highway at the touch of an electric button concealed off the road.

The tankman's job is one of war's toughest and most dangerous. Protected only by steel helmets and earmuffs against the battering, topsy-turvy trip through shell craters and barbed wire barriers, soldiers inside the tank live in an inferno of noise, bruised and battered while the engines roar and enemy bullets spang against the steel sides. Behind them come the soldiers to mop up.

When a tank gets stuck atop a barrier it's time to move on, for soon an anti-tank gun will come along. While bullets whine all around, the crew must scramble out and retreat as best it can; a few seconds later an anti-tank bullet will find the fuel tanks and man's metal monster will explode. Thus each tank ends its career; though lives have been lost and a costly armored weapon has been blown to smithereens, armies at war consider both tank and crew have served their purpose if enough pillboxes were blown out.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Be careful not to fill baking dishes too full. Escalloped foods, rice puddings and fondues need about two inches of rising space. Foods made with baking powder, soda, cream of tartar or egg whites require at least three inches.

Place a piece of zinc on red-hot coals in the kitchen range or furnace. The vapor that arises while the zinc melts will remove soot from the chimney.

Try tinting your ice cubes with vegetable dyes. A spring salad, for instance, is delightful to look at and unusually crisp if it is set in a bowl of green ice cubes. Desserts may be worked out in the same way.

Tack several thicknesses of heavy cloth or paper over the corners of the table before covering it with new oilcloth. The recovering job will then be easier and will look much neater.

Sprinkle chopped, candied ginger over thin biscuit dough. Then spread the combination with soft butter. Cut into strips a fourth of an inch wide and two inches long. Bake quickly. Serve hot.

All plants should be sprayed over at least once a week, using clear tepid water. In the ordinary living room there is certain to be considerable dust, no matter how careful the housewife is.

Basting threads may be removed easily by clipping them at six-inch intervals and pulling them out with the blunt ends of scissors. In sewing snaps on garments sew all the halves on one side. Brush them over with chalk. Press against the other side of the garment and the chalk marks will show where each additional half should be attached.

Garden makers too often try to sow seeds in the ground just before a rain. This is a mistake for the rain will pack the earth and the moisture will escape. It is far better to plant after a rain and as soon as the ground is dried out sufficiently. Firm the soil over the plants so that the seed will come into close contact with it.

Norwood thought a minute. "If Rundhia should be planning a coup of some kind, don't you think he'd be cunning enough to kick up a smoke screen?"

"Rundhia is more impetuous than cunning," the Resident answered. Norwood thought again, scowling, for half a minute. Then:

"D'you think he's sufficiently impetuous to try to kill several birds with one stone?"

"He might be. He's an impatient fellow—not at all good at waiting for what he makes up his mind that he wants."

"If he could prejudice the case against the priests, by accusing them of having bribed me. And if he could break me for taking a bribe. And break you for knowing about it but doing nothing—there would be a scandal that might distract attention from whatever else he might be doing at the moment."

"I concede that," said the Resident. "But if I report you as charged with having accepted a bribe, can you disprove it? If you could identify the Brahmin who, you say, put those diamonds into your pocket without your knowledge, he would say on the witness stand that you had demanded a bribe, and that he saw some unknown person hand it to you. How can you prove you didn't know those diamonds were in your pocket? Can you?"

"No," said Norwood. "Stay away from the palace. Better wait until Rundhia makes the first move."

"You don't believe in taking bulls by the horns?"

"Norwood, I had a premonition the moment you arrived, that that red hair of yours would set fire to things. We're in a fine mess. It's either you or Rundhia. It breaks you, if he can make his accusations good. Witnesses come cheap in Xadur. He could hire them by the dozen. But if he fails to make it good, I think I can guarantee you it shall break him."

"Hardly fair to me, is it, to compel me to sit still and be shot at?"

"What do you suggest?"

"First, I'll write that statement. Then I'd like to have a talk with Miss Lynn Harding."

CHAPTER X

Moses Lafayette O'Leary, with a cigar in his teeth, wearing a clean striped shirt and a snow-white solar topee, strolled along the widest street of the bazaar; it was about fourteen feet wide, lined on either hand by rows of open shops in which bunnias sat cross-legged and admired the gracious ways of God, who brings business to people who wait patiently.

A sacred bull, abominably fat from plundering the sacks of grain in front of the corn-chandlers' shops, blocked O'Leary's way. He kicked the brute. It belled with rage and plunged into a Cheap Jack shop, upsetting tables and trays. The Cheap Jack and his family abused O'Leary instead of the bull, but O'Leary took no notice of such a trifle as that, beyond tilting the topee a bit further over his right eye. He was using his left eye. He had spotted Norwood lurking in a doorway, and he knew Norwood Mahlam waited for him; he looked as if he had been waiting a long time, exhausting nearly all the philosophy from behind that serenely wrinkled forehead.

"Wipe your spectacles," said Moses. "Don't you recognize me?" Norwood Mahlam began to answer in the vernacular. Moses interrupted: "Speak English. If you've business with me, I don't want it known all over the bazaar. Where's that three hundred rupees you promised me?"

"You are too late," said Norwood Mahlam.

"You mean you've spent it?"

"That is a foolish question. If I had spent it, I could get more—twice, three times as much."

"Uh-huh?" said Moses. "What do you mean? You were watching for me. What do you want?"

"Someone has taken a very much bigger bribe than three hundred rupees," said Norwood Mahlam.

"Who has?"

"Someone. You know him."

"You paid it to him?"

"No. Others paid it to him, and there were witnesses. But an impartial witness, who could testify to having seen the bribe in someone's tunic pocket, would be worth not three hundred rupees, but three times that much, or even more—say a thousand. That is a lot of money."

O'Leary grinned: "You show it to me."

Norwood Mahlam blinked behind his spectacles: "You take me for a simpleton? You think I carry fortunes in my pocket, to tempt the bazaar thieves?"

"Terms for witness," said O'Leary, "are cash in advance."

Norwood Mahlam blinked again. "If you will come with me—"

"I won't," said O'Leary. "I'm an easy man to deal with. Here, now or never."

Norwood Mahlam's attitude changed subtly. His almost invisible mouth grimaced into a smile behind the hair that usually masked revelation: "Ah, sahib! If it were only you that we must deal with. You we could count on. You we could trust. Your intelligence is such that we could safely pay you in advance and confidently count upon your testimony."

"You can cut the fat off the ham," said Moses. "Trot out the meat. What do you want that's worth a thousand rupees of anybody's money? It ain't your money."

"Sahib, Miss Harding saw a certain person drop from his pocket a packet containing diamonds of great value."

"Easy!" said O'Leary. "Easy. Now I get you! You and I can do business. You're a sensible man. The blokes who selected you to proposition me picked a winner, they did. Sure. You pay me a thousand rupees; and all I've got to do is to get a haircut and borrow an officer's uniform, and go and make love to the gal. That's simple. She'll fall head over heels in love with me as sure as my name's Moses. Then all I've got to do is teach the lady how to get a British officer in trouble. Oh, it's crafty! Come on, hand over your thousand rupees."

"But, sahib, listen to me."

"No. My ears are too full of your wisdom. They won't hold any more. D'you notice the toe of my boot? It's just been clobbered. It's hard. It's going to land right in your stomach if you waste any more of my time. Who's that bloke watching you?"

Norwood Mahlam turned, stared, blinked and shook his head: "I don't know who he is," he answered. "But I have been told that it is very dangerous to know too much and to refuse generous offers of payment for a very simple little thing that a man of your talents can easily do."

"What do you want me to do?"

"Invent an excuse to speak to Miss Lynn Harding. Tell her that a reward has been offered for a lost packet of diamonds, which are said to have been dropped by someone near the palace guesthouse veranda. Should you say it subtly, she will answer innocently. She will tell you what she saw. If you should take a witness with you—"

"Sergeant Stoddart, for instance?"

"Yes, the sergeant would do perfectly. Then there would be two reliable witnesses to what she said, and she would not retract. There would be a thousand rupees for you."

"And Captain Norwood?"

"That will be his business. It is unfortunate but—"

"I'm a halfbreed, I am," Moses answered, "and I'm a sinner, if you know what that means. I could use that thousand rupees. But I'd rather go to hell for pulling out your tongue by the roots than for framing my officer. He has his faults, but he's a gentleman and I've kept him out of trouble for thirteen years. Go and tell that to the Brahmins. Scram!"

Norwood Mahlam smiled again. "There are means," he remarked, "for compelling silence."

"Yeah, I know," said Moses. "You signal that bloke in the red turban, and he sticks a knife in my back. I'll give him the signal and let's see what happens. Here goes!"

Somewhere Moses had learned soccer, and learned it well. His right toe landed accurately on the bulge of Norwood Mahlam's belly and almost buried itself. Moses right fist moved eight inches like a piston. A hook to the jaw staggered Norwood Mahlam backwards into a dark doorway, where he lay writhing. There was no need to waste any more attention on Norwood Mahlam.

Norwood's voice startled her.

But the man in a red turban, who had been watching the conversation, made a signal. A constable, who had been loitering through the bazaar, abruptly turned his back and walked away. The man in the red turban rushed at Moses, not showing his knife until he was almost within stabbing distance. But his tempo was wrong. Perhaps he never learned soccer. Certainly he had never learned boxing; he carried his chin much too far forward. It was an absolutely perfect target for Moses' toe, which very nearly broke from the impact. The man in the red turban dropped without a groan, motionless, stunned. Moses picked up his knife, wiped it carefully, smelt the blade and ran his thumb gently along the edge. A very dirty looking person in a huge soiled white turban and ragged clothing emerged from a doorway and grinned at Moses. Moses handed him the knife:

"Khabardar hona! Zahr!—Watch out. That thing's poisoned. I can smell it. See here now: I'm off to the cock-fights—after that, a woman—I don't know yet which woman, but she'll be a tiger-cat, so stand by. There'll be others laying for me. Use that knife if you have to. I've got to dig to the bottom of this."

Norwood cantered from the Residency toward the guesthouse; to have galloped would have been a bit too noticeable. Even so, he was delayed, near the end of the street that leads toward the teeming section of the city. Moses O'Leary stood there watching for him. He looked filthy, and at least partially drunk. But he made signals. It was almost never wise to ignore O'Leary's signals. Norwood drew rein.

"Hsst!" said O'Leary. "I've news!"

"Quick."

"It ain't good news."

"Out with it."

"It's all over the bloody bazaar that you've taken a bribe from the priests. Say it ain't true!"

"What did you say?"

"I said what I've told the priest any number of times: I'm a bad man, I am. There's almost nothing I ain't guilty of, one time or another. But I've this to my credit. I'm the wet and dry nurse to a gentleman. That's what I said."

"What do you mean by all over the bazaar? Who told you?"

"All the gamblers know it."

"Hold your tongue. Go straight back to the camp. Wait there for me."

"But I've more news—worse than that news."

"Keep it. Do as I told you. Hold your tongue. Return to camp and wait for me. I'm going to the palace."

When he arrived at the gates he turned his horse over to one of the guards.

There were five huge trunks on the veranda and three native servants. Mrs. Harding, looking pale and in a vile temper, reclined on the chaise longue, superintending the packing of the trunks.

"Good afternoon. Can I speak to Miss Lynn Harding?"

Norwood's voice startled her. The certainty that he had overheard her remarks to the servants increased her anger. She didn't even invite him on to the veranda.

"No."

"Sorry," said Norwood. "I must. Where is she?"

"Must? Oh, well, come in, Captain Norwood. Tell one of these imbeciles to take the things off that chair."

"Is Miss Harding here?"

"No. Pray be seated. You may give your message to me."

"The earliest mention of a sundial is, of course, in the Bible, on the occasion of the good King Hezekiah's prayer to God, when sick and aging, that He would extend his life, apparently for the sole but excellent reason that he loved it," says Richard le Gallienne in "From a Paris Scrapbook." "He dreaded to behold man no more with the inhabitants of the world, for," he cried, "O Lord, by these things men live, and in all these things is the life of my spirit—perhaps the most human cry in all literature."

"And God took pity on him, granting him a reprieve of 15 years, putting back the clock of time: 'Behold I will bring again the shadow of the degrees, which is gone down in the sundial of Ahaz 10 degrees backward.' So the sun returned 10 degrees, by which it was gone down."

This gracious miracle happened about 700 B. C. King Charles V gave the first public clock to Paris in 1370, says Mr. Le Gallienne. "The clock we still see, with its beautiful dial, set in the Tour de Horloge of the Palais de Justice," he adds. "It was made by the famous clockmaker Henry de Vick, and a similar clock (still in going order) had been installed in Dover castle, England, a few years before (1348)."

In olden days, most men about town carried two watches on their fobs, to check one by the other. Yet this precaution was rather useless, Mr. Le Gallienne says, for when they didn't agree it was a question of which to believe. For instance:

"A witty story is told of the famous dandy, the Marechal de Richelieu, who always carried two, both so beautiful that one day a certain great lady admired them so much that she asked to hold them in her hands that she might examine them closer. Then, to her great confusion, she let them slip out of her fingers and they fell to the ground. The gallant Marechal did his best to comfort her. 'Don't distress yourself,' he said gaily, 'It is the first time I ever saw them go together.'"

MICAH'S VISION OF PEACE

LESSON TEXT—Micah 4:1-5; 5:2-5a. GOLDEN TEXT—And they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.—Micah 4:3.

Peace on earth! Why, that is hardly more than a phrase which we recall at Christmastime as we think of the song of the angels. Yet now is the time to assure people that there will be peace on earth. Peacemakers who are now silent were striving to bring in a man-made peace, following a will-o'-the-wisp. Let us tell men about the real peace which will come when the Prince of Peace sets up His kingdom. Let us urge upon them the glad acceptance of His personal kingship in their hearts that they may even now know peace within.

Micah warned Judah that their rejection of God and His love would bring them sorrow and judgment. In the midst of his message, however, he breaks forth into a glowing prophecy of the glory that is to come during the reign of the Messiah, the Prince of Peace.

I. The Foundation of Peace—God's Word (4:1, 2).

Vainly do men labor to bring about a lasting peace built upon the words of men, for the moment there seems to be gain in repudiating promises given in the greatest of solemnity, they become mere scraps of paper. There is no security in such words, nor in the guns and battleships used to support or to break them.

God's Word, the teaching of His law, walking in His paths—here is the foundation for real peace. Micah speaks of the time "in the last days" when the people of the earth shall go up to God's house to hear His Word and to learn to walk in His ways. To that blessed and holy day we look forward with anticipation and joy even as we now bring men the message of Christ's redemption and His peace.

II. The Prince of Peace—Jesus Christ (4:3-5).

This beautiful portion of God's Word (and such parallel passages as Isa. 2:1-5; 11:1-12) gathers together the longing and hopes of peace-loving men of every age. Perfect justice, the end of all wars, prosperity for peaceful pursuits, boys no longer learning warfare, complete social security, universal worship of God—what a thrilling promise!

Will it ever come true? Yes. When? In the "latter days" (v. 1, R. V.). Who has made such a promise? God Himself. Who will bring it about? God's Son, the Prince of Peace, who will come to "judge between many people."

Why will men be so blind to the "sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place" (II Pet. 1:19)? Why will we reject Him who is "the day star" (II Pet. 1:19; Rev. 22:16) and who is even now ready to "arise in your hearts?"

III. His Coming—As Saviour (5: 2, 3).

This remarkable Messianic prophecy gave more than 700 years before the birth of Christ the exact place of His birth, so closely identified as to make both the prophecy and its fulfillment a testimony to the inspiration of the Bible. Note that this was the passage with which the priests and scribes answered the question of Herod (Matt. 2:1, 4-6) regarding the place where the Messiah was to be born.

Thus the coming ruler of Israel, the Judge of all peoples, the Prince of Peace, is none other than the Lord Jesus who was born into this world as the Babe of Bethlehem, "a Saviour . . . Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:11). Israel rejected Him and He had to "give them up" (v. 3), but the time will come when they shall see Him as their King.

IV. His Reign—As King (5:4, 5a).

"This man shall be our peace" (v. 5, R. V.). He it is who "shall be great unto the ends of the earth" (v. 4); and that can be said of no man in all history except of Him of whom we sing,

Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Does his successive journeys run;
His kingdom stretch from shore to shore
Till moons shall wax and wane no more.
—Isaac Watts.

His shall not be the reign of a despot, for we read that "He shall feed his flock in the strength of Jehovah" (v. 4, R. V.). His enemies and the enemies of God the Father must be put down, but His people will find Him to be the tender "good shepherd" who "giveth his life for the sheep" (John 10:11). He is that now to every believer. Sinner, why not take Him now as your Saviour, your Good Shepherd, and join with His people in looking for His coming as King?

Opposition Helps

Efforts against the truth sometimes help its progress; the seal and the guard only make it more clear that the Saviour rose from the dead.

LESSON TEXT—Micah 4:1-5; 5:2-5a. GOLDEN TEXT—And they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.—Micah 4:3.

Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:11). Israel rejected Him and He had to "give them up" (v. 3), but the time will come when they shall see Him as their King.

IV. His Reign—As King (5:4, 5a).

"This man shall be our peace" (v. 5, R. V.). He it is who "shall be great unto the ends of the earth" (v. 4); and that can be said of no man in all history except of Him of whom we sing,

Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Does his successive journeys run;
His kingdom stretch from shore to shore
Till moons shall wax and wane no more.
—Isaac Watts.

His shall not be the reign of a despot, for we read that "He shall feed his flock in the strength of Jehovah" (v. 4, R. V.). His enemies and the enemies of God the Father must be put down, but His people will find Him to be the tender "good shepherd" who "giveth his life for the sheep" (John 10:11). He is that now to every believer. Sinner, why not take Him now as your Saviour, your Good Shepherd, and join with His people in looking for His coming as King?

Opposition Helps

Efforts against the truth sometimes help its progress; the seal and the guard only make it more clear that the Saviour rose from the dead.

—Broadus.

SUPPORT SCOUTING — WHY? — WHO?

The thoughts possessed by many as to who should support the Boy Scout Movement are in a great many instances wrong.

Everyone, whether or not a mother or father of a boy whose age permits him to become a Scout, should most emphatically support the Scouting Movement. Perhaps, there is a misunderstanding of its value—it is not only conducted to offer amusement for the "men of tomorrow," but to lay the foundation for these men, that is, to teach them what the Scout Laws state, namely: Trust, Loyalty, Helpfulness, Friendliness, Courtesy, Kindness, Obedience, Cheerfulness, Thrift, Courage, Cleanliness, and Reverence. These qualities are necessary for a great personality. Any boy with vigor unhesitatingly grasps the opportunity to win these "stones" for the foundation upon which to build his character, and finds enjoyment in winning them.

There is not nearly enough consideration given to this great movement by those who do not have children of eligible age. These people could do as much, if not a great deal more than the mothers and fathers in helping someone's boy to become a "likeable" person. This is true because boys at this age enjoy the feeling that someone besides their mother and father are interested in them.

Remember—money is not the greatest factor in the supporting of the Scouting Movement, but the interest shown, the encouragement, and the helping hand offered by everyone is without the slightest doubt the greatest. So why not, if it at all possible, support Scouting.

For one half hour every Thursday after school, Miss Farrar and Mrs. Buys conduct a period of music appreciation. This is for the children in the school who wish to attend.

Last Thursday they finished the reading of Wagner's opera "Tannhauser." The children added to their list of favorite records, "Pilgrim's Classic's."

The Achievement club's candy sale which they held Wednesday, April 17, netted a profit of $5.67. This money is to be used for the purchase of a suitable painting for the school as a gift from the Achievement club.

Anyone wishing to make the Tour to the City Furniture Co., next Monday, April 22, get in touch with Mrs. Oliver. Leaving here at 12:30.

Mrs. Anna Trevarthen aged 81, who has been in bed for eight weeks is now up and around.

Find out who are Doty and Daffy and how they try to save the family from the poorhouse by disguising themselves as little girls so that their beautiful mamma's suitor, Mr. Paxton Belmont, who wants a young wife, can be made to believe she is much younger than she really is.

Also how the girls' fiancé's queer game by dressing as little boys and appearing before Mr. Belmont as her twin sons. They also give the suitor's gold-digging son the walloping of his life and nothing but the arrival of the boy's uncle, Hugh rand, straightens out the tangle of affairs.

In The Churches

TINLEY PARK METHODIST
L. E. Weisbach, Pastor
Worship service and Sunday school held in the Tinley Park Methodist church has been steadily forging ahead. Monday evening those working were highly elated when the campaign went over the half way mark. The stimulation of being able to do such a piece of work for Tinley Park, and for the Kingdom of God has been a source of deepening to the character and soul of the workers.The Campaign Committee has decided to drive through to a victorious finish by Friday, April 26, at which time there will be a VICTORY CELEBRATION. Because the members of this church feel that their new church home is a distinct contribution to the life of Tinley Park, the entire community is invited to participate in this celebration which will be held in the new building at 7:30 p. m., Friday, April 26.

To many people, the answer to the question, "What do our young people think about?" became evident Tuesday. Members of the Epworth League of Tinley Park gathered of their own free will on the church premises and began to straighten up some of the things the eye did not find too attractive.

This is a silent answer, in act and deed that young people are interested in church work. It is of special interest, for this work, stopped by the rain of Wednesday, was done on one of those precious spring vacation days. This is evidence that young people are deeply concerned with deep and vital issues in life. They are looking forward to activity and fellowship in their new church home, that they have reason to be proud of.

The work they began, has rumors running in it of "For a beautiful Church Yard! We are all in back of them! Let us all take the hint and make Tinley Park more beautiful. What do you say?"

"Doctrine of Atonement" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 21.

The Golden Text was, "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many" (Matthew 20:28).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us" (Ephesians 2:13, 14).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "We acknowledge Jesus' atonement as the evidence of divine, efficacious Love, unfolding man's unity with God through Christ Jesus the Way-shower; and we acknowledge that man is saved through Christ, through Truth; Life, and Love as demonstrated by the Galilean Prophet in healing the sick and overcoming sin and death" (p. 497).

TINLEY PARK CLUB WOMEN!

Among the special reasons why you should be present at the annual meeting April 24, at 1:30 p. m. in the civic room of the school, are the very interesting reports the department chairmen give; the closing story of "Illinois", this time, "Scenic Beauty Spots of Illinois" by Mrs. Irwin Stover; and "Cousin Minnie Read It", a publicity skit put on by Mrs. John Swisher. Your friends have been working to make this skit very much worth going to enjoy.

The morning meeting will be held with Mrs. R. C. Hannum. The subject for study is "Early American Poets", "Our American Language" and a Better Speech report by Mrs. Kester.

The Public Welfare department, Mrs. A. A. Wagner, chairman, made the annual visit to Oak Forest, last Friday. Twelve ladies went bearing 13 dozen cup cakes. Coffee had been made at the Institution and two wards were served. Also the Occupational Therapy department.

A thrilling occasion was reported. Nine members went to the annual meeting of the Third Congressional District at Thornton high school in Calumet City, April 17. Mrs. W. W. Kester gave the report of the nominating committee of which she was chairman. Mrs. Chas. Nielsen and Mrs. John E. Swisher were our delegates and of course voted. Mrs. Wm. Funk cooperated as did Mrs. Malcolm Hargraves, art chairman, in the annual Art exhibit. Mrs. Funk with a most beautiful collection of many beautiful articles made from, tinted to please, shells gathered in Florida. Both Mrs. Funk's display and Mrs. Hargraves' lovely water color sketches, attracted unusual attention at the show.

Calumet City Woman's Club joined the Federation 16 years ago. The hospitality of the Club was perfect and the occasion was enjoyed by the hundreds present.

Two new clubs were voted into the district, Fernwood with 51 members and Markham Juniors with 10 members.

Recently all the English classes wrote essays on the subject of "Conservation." We herewith submit two of the best.

CONSERVATION

(By Margaret Bergin)

The story of our present-day conservation program is an old one, but none the less interesting. We, here in America, conserve many things. Among them are flowers, trees, animals, fuel, and land.

When our fore-fathers first came to this land there was an abundance of wild life. Everywhere could be heard the calls of sweet-songed birds. Their beautiful plumage was often seen, flitting in and out of the bright sunshine. Fields upon fields of wild flowers were growing in the open prairies, making a sea of color. Herds of moose, elk and buffalo roamed the plains. Their great thundering could be heard often in the night. Tall towers of trees provided shady lanes. Great forests shadowed the mountainsides. The virgin soil was rich and fertile.

All these things and many more did the early pioneers find when they landed upon the shores of 'America the Beautiful.' It was things, such as these which inspired early song-writers to compose lyrics of praise of America.

But the pioneers did not use wisely these gifts given them. They used wood whenever they wanted to, with no thought of those to come after them. They and their sons and grand-sons used it so freely that today there are but few large forests left. Where once there stood in majesty, tall, towers of leafy trees, there now stands a few lone stragglers, reminiscent of their by-gone splendor. Fire, too, has taken its toll. Careless campers have often left tiny sparks, smoldering in ashes, to rise and spread into fierce fires. We must prevent the disappearance of these splendid trees. We must look ahead, into the future and plan for an America full of trees. We must begin now to plant these future forests.

In place of fields of flowers, there are now barren prairies. No longer are seen the brilliant colors of wild poppies, daisies, dogwood, and violets. Tourists, seeing this beauty way-laid them. Frost and wind killed them. Hardly any of these are to be seen. These beautiful flowers were put on this earth for a purpose, and that purpose was to help make our land beautiful. Why not leave this beauty for everyone to enjoy, instead of selfishly taking it home where it will wither and decay?

No longer to be seen are the buffalo, elk, moose and deer. They have all been killed off for food or hides or sport. Only a few of these are left in captivity, and the number is yearly growing smaller.

The brilliant humming birds, wood-peckers and thrushes can scarcely be found. They have been shot and have died of starvation and the cold. We could prevent this if we would set out small trays of food for the birds, build small houses for them to live in and cordially invite them in, organize bird-clubs and get the boys and girls interested in birds and their habits, get them to see the value of the birds to our country, and make them understand the importance of conserving the birds.

The soil, once rich and fertile, is not now so. It has been worn down by floods and the top soil washed away. Planting of the same crops, year after year, in the same place has taken all of the vital elements from the soil and make it worthless. To remedy this, we should rotate nearly the same foods.

Our crops and study modern government methods of planting.

All this, and much more must we do to conserve our plants, animals, and land to make America truly the "Home of the free and the brave."

FOOD MARKET

Advice-

MANY old sayings come to mind at the moment such as "Man proposes, God disposes" and "The best laid plans of mice and men gang aft agley." The promised abundance of Florida vegetables is to fall again due to another frost and severe hailstorm. Abundance will have to wait until plantings in other more northerly states mature, though supplies are larger.

Asparagus is gradually becoming more plentiful though a late spring in the southeast makes California the main source of supply.

Onions are costing appreciably more as winter supplies dwindle and a small spring Texas crop is anticipated.

Meats and Poultry Good Values
All meats but lamb are plentiful and very reasonable in price. Steak dinners and chicken dinners are within reach of even modest pocketbooks. Pork, both fresh and smoked, is very reasonable. The lean portion of pork has recently been found to be among the richest sources of vitamin B, or thiamin. In fact, the pork and wheat germ advocates may be adding lean pork and ham to their lists.

Fowl, ducklings and large size turkeys are low in price. New crop duck eggs are costing no more than last year's crop. For community or church suppers or for group entertaining and a buffet meal, the large size turkey is an excellent choice.

Eggs Plentiful and Cheap
Even with the government purchasing eggs to peg prices, they are still low in price. Custards are favorites for dessert, soft or cup custards for children, custard pies for men, and all the variations between for the whole family. Two egg-rich foods not so common but well liked are popovers and cream puffs. Both are easy to make if the simple directions are carefully followed.

Rhubarb, Pineapple and Strawberries

Whether you want a compote, a pie, a pudding or spring preserves, the spring trio of rhubarb, pineapple and strawberries alone or in combination are delicious. Rhubarb will be cheaper later and so probably will strawberries but they are all moderate in price and answer that spring hunger for tart fresh tasting foods.

Apples, bananas, grapefruit and oranges are still the standby in the fruit bowl though grapes and pears are fairly plentiful.

Here is a menu* made up of seasonal foods at reasonable cost.

CONSERVATION

(By Bill Maddox)

Nature made everything balance when she constructed the world. Each thing depends on something else for its existence even down to the lowliest insect, animal or bird. This delicate balance between nature was disrupted as man kept clearing the land of its natural beauty.

The early pioneers didn't care to conserve the natural resources. They thought that when one piece of land was no good they could move on and clear a new place. As a result we had big dust storms from the west; the Mississippi over-flowed; and many other things occurred that had never happened before because the Indians didn't try to farm, but knew what would happen if the places were left barren. In the last few years the public has just started to conserve.

The Conservation department is one of the biggest organizations of Illinois that is fighting for conserving the resources. It is a self-supporting department that gets the money to keep it going from the revenue of hunting and trapping licenses. The department needs all the help it can get to put the program across in all places. Their work includes all the phases of conserving. It restocks streams and lakes with fish and lets loose many banded ducks, quail, and pheasants. They will turn loose 50,000 ring-necked pheasants this year. The bands on the birds' legs are meant to trace their flights and nesting grounds.

The places for birds should be made more attractive by putting up houses and planting food and cover. The following facts will show how much the birds help us:

1. Alfalfa Weevil Plague.
The alfalfa weevil has many enemies. The kildoor that ate 383, the black-bird that ate 422, and the oriole that ate 375 are a few examples of how many weevils the birds ate. One farmer in Utah claims that a family of sparrows ate 500,000 weevils in one year.

2. Field-mouse Plague
In 1907-8 a field mouse plague was going on in the Humboldt River region of Nevada. Gulls, hawks and owls bled to the scene. These birds ate 900,000 field mice a month until it was over.

3. Cotton Weevil.
There are six kinds of birds that feed on the weevil on the ground and 35 that feed on them in the air. The best one on the ground is the Oriole who takes the weevil right from the bud. The Tanger is also a very good fighter against the weevil.

4. The Green Bug Plague.
In North Carolina, the green bug plague was at its height in the middle of the migratory season of such birds as the Vesper, Goldfinch and chipping Sparrows. On a small farm there were 3,000 birds. The birds destroyed the bugs at a rate of 2 million a day and sometimes they doubled that.

5. Rocky Mountain Plague.
The plague was made up of locusts. Every kind of bird was present at this place from ducks to sparrows. Some were residents and others had come hundreds of miles.

All the birds present ate the locusts. These facts show that birds flock to the scene to put down the plagues just to help the farmer. You now have a better idea of how the birds help us. They rush millions of representatives to the scene of the plague to put it down. The birds do the same thing every day on a smaller scale all over the country. Instead of wanting to kill these birds the farmer should protect them.

Gane birds also do their part in helping the farmer. If the farmer has a good enough place for the birds to stay he will have plenty of sport hunting them and he will be able to rent his farm to hunters or he can shoot them to fill his larder if there gets to be too many. It would take just a little thought on the farmers' part to improve wild life environment on his farm. If he would let corners and old fence rows grow over and a strip of grain at the edge, he would have the place abounding with game. He should try to keep cattle from feeding on the small trees in the wood-lot because the cows are killing the next crop of trees if they do that. The dirt is packed so hard where the cattle walk that nothing will grow. As cover is cut down, so decreases the population of the wild life. The farmer will be helping himself if he helps the wild life. They will help him keep the insect population from growing too much.

The farmer could let the fence rows grow and keep the cattle out of part of the woods. Some fields are eroding badly near Orland. They are so deep a man can stand in them and not be seen. If these gullies were planted with trees and shrubs, animals would come back and the farmer would have a future wood lot. Walnut or black locust are best for gullies.

Farmers have trouble enough getting money during the winter for all the things he needs, so if the farm has a good population of fur-bearing animals he may trap and make himself some money. The fur-bearers around Orland soon may be trapped out if the farmers do not start planting cover for them. Their numbers are rapidly being thinned. The Conservation department is trying to help them also. If there is always enough cover and food there will always be fur-bearers. These animals live near the water or on hill-sides. They should be helped all they possibly can because they bring cash.

To show what animals need in the way of cover and food the following will show what to do to induce them:

1. Muskrat. They need water in the form of a pond for winter where they build a house and in the spring they migrate to the streams where they dig a tunnel into the bank where they raise their young. The food of the muskrat includes apples, corn, carrots, rushes, wild rice and vegetables.

2. Mink. He prefers overgrown stream banks. He has a hole in a thicket near the fast part of the stream. The male is a wanderer and goes as many as 10 or 15 miles a night, but the female watches her young all the time. His food consists of fish, mice, squirrels, lizards, birds and eggs.

3. Skunk. The Skunk is not as bad a fellow as he is thought to be. He sometimes goes through life without using his spray. They are very good pets. He doesn't think anything is funny; if you come too close you will wish you hadn't. He prefers overgrown gullies and stream beds for his travels. He travels through tiles and dry places, and hates water. If he gets wet, he cannot use his spray. His food consists of birds, eggs, fruit and vegetables.

4. Civet Cat. The Civet has the same haunts as the skunk and has nearly the same foods.

5. Opossum. The opossum, one of the weirdest animals in the United States, has a pouch in which the young are carried until they are about 6 or 8 weeks old. He usually doesn't play 'possum but faints. Scientists say he faints because he isn't smart enough to play dead. This fellow's food consists of eggs, fruit, frogs, nuts, berries, grain, vegetables and poultry.

6. Raccoon. The raccoon is a very clean animal. Even if he can't wash his food in water, he goes through the motion. He prefers wooded lots for his home ground and sleeps in a hollow tree in the daytime and at night goes out to hunt food.

After reading these few facts you may have an idea on how the animals get their food and what cover they need. The damming up of a small stream will make a pond which if allowed to grow will attract wild life of all kinds. The pond may be used for fishing, hunting around the edges, and for cattle to drink out of in summer. The farmer will have an excellent place for a wild life sanctuary there.

Conservation should be helped in all ways to keep the movement going.

ORLAND 4-H NEWS

The second meeting of the Orland 4-H club was held at the home of Raymond Bernard on Friday, April 12, 1940 at 8:30 p. m.

Nine members were present. John Crawford was taken in as a new member. Plans were made for the 4-H rally.

Raymond Bernard gave a talk on "Feeding the Dairy Calf." Arthur Kampe gave a talk on "Housing and Care of the Dairy Calf." Alice Ihlenfeld gave a talk on "Housing and Care of Baby Chicks."

The next meeting will be held at the home of Tom and John Crawford on May the 10th.

A card trick was shown by Norman Yunker. Games were played and a fine lunch was served by Mrs. Bernard.

Cupid Is Busy

With the forthcoming marriage and retirement from service of Misses Agnes O'Mara and Helen Brennan, stewardess-nurses on the "California" of the Rock Island Lines, Dan Cupid will have taken eight of the eleven nurses on this train during the past year, it is announced by the passenger department of that railway. The Californian is operated jointly between Chicago and Los Angeles by the Rock Island-Southern Pacific.

Miss O'Mara has advised the railroad of her engagement to Wm. F. Shattuck of the Western Electric Company of Chicago, and Miss Brennan likewise announces her engagement to C. J. Larson of the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank. Both stewardess-nurses entered the railroad's service in 1937 when the train was inaugurated.

Miss Brennan is a native of Calumet, Michigan, and a registered nurse from Mercy Hospital. Miss O'Mara was born in Dubuque, Iowa and registered from St. Mary's Hospital.

Vacancies, caused by the retirement of the nurses, are filled from a long waiting list of applicants.

Noted Harpist Will Give Concert at Tinley Park Church

Otto Baganz of Fond Du Lac, Wis., one of the leading harpists of the country, will appear in concert on Sunday night at 7:30 in Trinity Lutheran church, of which the Rev. M. Frick is pastor. The general public is cordially invited. No admission will be charged, but a free will offering will be taken to remunerate the artist and his assistants for their services.

Mr. Baganz is widely acclaimed a very talented and skilled musician. Through many years of faithful study and application he has acquired a brilliant technique on an instrument which is known to be one of the most difficult to master. He began playing the harp at the age of nine years. He is a pupil of Enrico Tramonti, who is recognized to have been one of the world's greatest harpists, and of Edmund Schuecker, the great chorale harpist of yesteryear. For seven seasons he studied under and worked with Joseph Vito of Chicago. He now specializes in church music and during the past four years has made extensive concert tours in some twenty different States. He holds the unique distinction of being the only living Lutheran Chorale Harpist.

Assisting the harpist in his concerts are his son Reuben with the Cathedral Marimba and Miss Rheda Trapp with Vibraharp and Cathedral Symphony Chimes. Together with Mr. Baganz they constitute The Baganz Trio. Their ensemble has very largely been pronounced an excellent combination with strikingly beautiful tone color, splendidly adapted to their programs in which they feature chorales, hymns, and religious music.

Of more than passing interest is the instrument which Mr. Baganz owns and plays. It is claimed to be the last word in the harpist's art, both as to construction and tone, and has been termed "the Stradivarius of harps." It was produced specially for exhibition at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago and was there shown as "the finest harp ever built." It is worthy of note also that this particular instrument was played for the first time in public by Mr. Baganz in a symphony concert towards the close of the Chicago World's Fair.

The Baganz Trio comes well recommended by people prominent in church and musical circles, and no one will ever regret hearing their unique and uplifting concert program.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Reviewed by CARTER FIELD

McNary says those who voted against trade treaty will benefit . . . Carter Field believes it good policy for Dewey and Vandenberg to favor St. Lawrence seaway.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Sen. Charles L. McNary of Oregon, Republican leader of the senate, expresses the view that members of the house and senate who voted against the reciprocal trade agreement policy will benefit in their primary and election fights, while those who voted with Cordell Hull all the way down the line are likely to suffer.

This is probably true, utterly regardless of the merits of the reciprocal trade agreement policy, and even regardless of popular opinion on it, strange as such a statement may seem. But politics is a law unto itself, not infrequently seeming to have no logic and certainly very little mathematics in it.

The politician early learns that it is often excellent strategy to fight for something that cannot prevail, or to fight against something that is sure to prevail. If he was on the losing side, no one can prove to his constituents that things might not have been better for them if he had won. But if he won, then he has to take the responsibility and suffer perhaps from the disappointments.

Senator McNary is undoubtedly right in his political analysis as to results, whether he is right in thinking a majority of the voters are opposed to the reciprocal treaties or not.

DIFFICULT TO PROVE

Men who opposed extending this power will be able to say to their constituents that industries in their sections would have been very much better off if this threat were not hanging over them. It will be very difficult for their opponents to prove otherwise. It simply is not susceptible of proof in most instances.

Whereas the people who might be supposed to have been benefited by the treaties will not be excited about this issue, even if they admit that they have been benefited, which last is a violent assumption, because people do not go out of their way to concede that it was the benevolent act of a government which really created their opportunities, rather than their own initiative and enterprise.

The people benefited will for the most part be swayed in their votes for or against senators and representatives for other reasons than the trade-treaty argument.

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

There was nothing surprising about the statements of Thomas E.

Thomas E. Dewey

he is still continuing.

The funny part of the picture is that if Mr. Dewey were running for United States senator from New York, instead of for the Republican nomination for President, he would not dare announce his advocacy of the St. Lawrence seaway—or, if he did, it would be over the violent objection of his campaign managers and advisers. Advocacy of the seaway by a New York senatorial candidate would be equivalent to forcing a good many thousand voters who would otherwise be supporters to vote against him.

This is true in every Atlantic coast state, from Maine on down.

POWER INTERESTS F. D. R.

Of course, President Roosevelt's personal interest in the project has never really been in the seaway phase, but in the electric power phase. But the inception of the whole thing was when the farmers of the Northwest became enthusiastic over the notion of getting seven cents more a bushel for their wheat because the freight charges to Liverpool could be cut that much—they were told—if the seaway were built. Also the cities on the Great Lakes, except Chicago, strongly favored the seaway because they figured it would make them world ports.

The United States doesn't export much wheat any more, but the farmers from Ohio to Montana and from Wisconsin to Kansas all think that the seaway would boost the price of wheat at their railroad stations.

NOVEL BUT GOOD IS THIS ORANGE VEAL ALMOND SALAD
(See Recipes Below)

Spring Salads for Spring Tonics

Time was when we needed sulphur and molasses, or its equivalent, as a spring tonic to repair the damages of a winter diet which was quite likely to be lacking in fresh fruit and vegetables. Nowadays spring tonics are unnecessary nuisances, for most of us, because even through the long winter months, a plentiful supply of fruits and vegetables is available.

But somehow this season creates an appetite for "something right out of the garden," and it's now that we find salads of fresh fruits and vegetables as refreshing as the first spring breeze.

Serving a salad is such a simple means of making sure that the day's quota of fresh vegetables or fruits is included in the diet.

Salads look so cool and inviting, and properly prepared they do such a lot toward perking up one's appetite. But they must be inviting to look at, cool and crisp, and well seasoned.

Wash salad greens carefully, then soak in cold water to make them very crisp. Remove all brown or wilted spots. Dry carefully on a towel or place cleaned salad greens in a clean sugar sack and shake or swirl vigorously to remove the drops of moisture that cling to the greens. Chill thoroughly.

Simple salads, in general, are the smartest—and if they're to serve their purpose as spring tonics, they're the best. Salads which are too rich, too elaborately garnished, or decked out with whipped cream, defeat their own purpose, and I have a feeling that it's one reason most men dislike salads, because too often they've had served to them in the name of salad, some queer, sticky concoction, with so many ingredients, so badly mangled, and so much garnish, that there's scarcely a salad green to be seen or recognized. Men do like good salads, though, and you'll find recipes for the kind they enjoy, in my booklet, "Feeding Father."

When you're planning your spring tonic salads, don't overlook the raw vegetables—shreds of pared, raw beets, slivers of carrot, and the tender young leaves of spinach, raw cauliflower, broken into flowerettes—is an excellent addition to a vegetable salad, and don't forget that just a suspicion of garlic in a vegetable salad is as important as the dressing! Minced green onion tops or chives will serve as a substitute, if your family doesn't approve of garlic.

Orange Veal Almond Salad. (Serves 6-8)

Novel but good is this orange veal almond salad. The orange blends with and brings out the flavors of the other ingredients. This is an especially excellent buffet salad.

2 cups orange half slices
2 cups cooked veal (diced)
2 cups celery (diced)
½ cup lemon french dressing
Lettuce
Watercress
½ cup toasted almonds

Blend orange, veal, celery and french dressing. Put in salad bowl, lined with lettuce and watercress. Top with the toasted almonds. Chicken may be substituted for veal.

Lemon French Dressing.

¼ cup lemon juice
¼ cup salad oil
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon sugar or honey

Stir or shake thoroughly before serving. Lemon juice is particularly good to bring out flavors in a dressing for a meat salad. (makes ½ cup.)

Pinwheel Salad.

Take halves of grapefruit and remove every other grapefruit segment, leaving membrane intact.

Spring Menus.

Menus, in spring, can be something very special—if you'll take advantage of the grand variety of foods available! In this column next week, Eleanor Howe will give you some of her own favorite suggestions for dressing up spring menus.

Prepare cherry-flavored gelatin and fill empty grapefruit sections with gelatin. When gelatin has stiffened, arrange each grapefruit half on bed of lettuce. Place mayonnaise in center of grapefruit and top with chopped green maraschino cherries.

'Salad Bowl' Fruit Salad

Toss lightly together in salad bowl, one cup watermelon balls, one cup muskmelon balls, one cup honey dew melon balls, one cup seeded red cherries, and one cup diced celery.

Add french dressing in sufficient quantity to thoroughly coat all fruits.

Have ready a supply of chilled, crisp french endive. Place two or three stalks on side of each individual salad plate and serve with salad bowl fruit salad.

May Basket Salad.

Take the desired number of firm uniform tomatoes, cut out stems and hollow out the center slightly. Slice rings of green pepper about ¼ inch thick, cut in half and fasten on tomato with toothpicks to form handle of basket. Place hearts of lettuce and radish roses (using toothpicks for stems) in the basket. Place basket on lettuce leaves. Garnish with mayonnaise.

Spicy Summer Salad.

1 cup vinegar
½ teaspoon whole cloves
1 teaspoon stick cinnamon
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups fresh spinach leaves
1 large carrot
1 stalk celery

Boil vinegar, spices and salt together for 10 minutes. Strain vinegar and chill. Scrape carrot. Chop all of the fresh vegetables together until they are fairly fine. Dress with the vinegar mixture and serve at once.

Gardener's Salad.

(Serves 8-10)
1 sliver of peeled garlic
1 head crisp lettuce (shredded)
4 tomatoes (peeled and cut in wedges)
1 cucumber (peeled and sliced)
3 young onions (sliced thin)
4 radishes (sliced thin)
1 green pepper (cut in rings)
2 carrots (sliced)
6 slices bacon (fried crisp, and crumbled)
1 cup french dressing

Be sure the vegetables are washed, wiped dry, and very cold and crisp before starting to mix the salad. Sprinkle the inside of a large salad bowl with salt. With a fork, rub the garlic well in the salt. Remove garlic. Put in the shredded lettuce, the vegetables and bacon, then the french dressing. Mix well, so that all the ingredients are completely coated with dressing. Serve immediately.

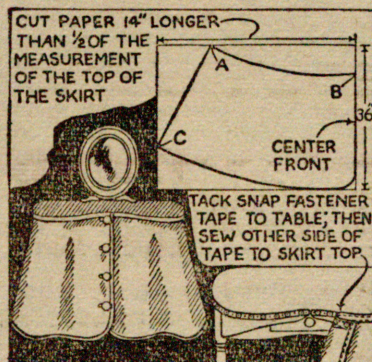

Would You Like to Please Father?

If you want to please father, serve him foods he really likes—simple green salads, beef roast with rich brown gravy, and the plain "family-style" desserts his mother used to make. You'll find plenty of practical recipes and menus for men in Eleanor Howe's cook book "Feeding Father." Send 10 cents in coin to "Feeding Father," care Eleanor Howe, 919 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, and get a copy of "Feeding Father" for your kitchen library.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

HOW to cut a flared dressing table skirt without fullness at the top, is something worth knowing. You may be making a smartly tailored affair of white pique with pink bindings and buttons, like the one shown here; or an under lining for a full skirt of transparent material.

The diagram shows how to make a pattern for half of the skirt. The center front may be placed on a fold of the goods in cutting if there is no front opening. Cut the paper by the dimensions in the diagram. Mark point A in 14-inches from the upper left corner. Measure up from the lower right corner a distance equaling the length of the skirt from A to the left edge of the paper and mark point C. Connect these points with lines drawn, as shown.

NOTE: The new 32-page edition of Book 1—"Sewing for the Home Decorator," shows three other interesting styles of dressing tables, with detailed directions for making. Also slip covers, draw curtains; and numerous household articles. Write Mrs. Spears for a copy, enclosing 10 cents to cover cost. Address:

Bombarding Clouds

In 1891 congress appropriated $9,000 for experiments in producing rain artificially. Most of the experiments were conducted in Texas under the direction of Gen. Robert Dyrenforth, as a special agent of the department of agriculture. Dynamite and hydrogen-oxygen-filled balloons made the noise, and a little rain did fall, but according to meteorologists this was only that which was due to fall in the regular and undisturbed course of the weather.

PITCHER WASHINGTON

Teacher—Do you think George Washington could have pitched a dollar across the Rappahannock river, as he is said to have done?
 Jimmie—I don't know; I guess so. Our history book says that he pitched his camp across the Delaware river when the British were pursuing him.

Tabby's Titles

Recently there was published a phonetic translation of sounds in different languages, and the cat's miaow was one sound which each of these languages interpreted in the same way. It is strange that the word "cat" is so similar in various languages.
 In Scandinavia the animal is called "katt," in France "chat," in Germany "katze," in Holland "cat," in Italy "gatto," in Spain, "gato," in Russia "kats," and in Poland "kot." And the Romans had a word for it—"catus."

WHY SUFFER Functional
FEMALE COMPLAINTS

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Helped Thousands!
 Few women today do not have some sign of functional trouble. Maybe you've noticed YOURSELF getting restless, moody, nervous, depressed lately—your work too much for you—Then try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to help quiet unstrung nerves, relieve monthly pain (cramps, backache, headache) and weak dizzy fainting spells due to functional disorders. For over 50 years Pinkham's Compound has helped hundreds of thousands of weak, rundown nervous women. Try it!

Wise Among Fools
 Those who wish to appear wise among fools, among the wise men seem foolish.—Quintilian.

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.
 If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.
 Eat this crunchy toasted cereal regularly, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

With the Rogue
 If you pity a rogue you are no great friend of honest men.

FEEL PEPPY! RELIEVE THAT AWFUL BACKACHE
 DUE TO FATIGUE AND EXPOSURE
 Feel like stepping out again by relieving that backache (due to fatigue and exposure). Just rub on some En-ar-co and instantly it begins its four-fold work of helping soothe that back. Pleasant. At all drugists or send 10c for trial size to National Remedy Co., 55 W. 42 St., N. Y. C. Dept. W-3.

McCORMICK-DEERING

Peg-Tooth Harrows

THIS is a good time to inspect your peg-tooth harrows to find out whether all the sections are in good shape. Each section should be solid and rigid—every tooth should be secure.

If your harrows aren't in A-1 condition, come in and let us show you the complete line of McCormick-Deering Peg-Tooth Harrows. We have a good stock of them in the style you like best. There's no danger of a McCormick-Deering twisting out of shape. These harrows are well-braced and solidly built for good, clean work.

We'll quote you on a complete harrow or as many sections as you need. Ask us about extra sections to hook behind the plow or disk harrow when you farm with tractor power.
